WITHDRAWAL NOTICE

Modeling Deficit Hypothesis for Rising Autism Rates in the Post-Social Era

This edition attributed the rise in autism diagnoses primarily to diminished parental social modeling. It contains no study identifying that causal effect. CDC surveillance measures identified prevalence and documents variation in evaluation and identification practices. The proposed causal attribution is withdrawn.

Manuscript · pp. 1–3, causal argument

Evidence · CDC primary surveillance report · 16 sites / Bai and colleagues · five-country cohort